

2026 EUA GENERAL ASSEMBLY & ANNUAL CONFERENCE

University cooperation in changing contexts

15-17 April 2026, Yeditepe University, Istanbul, Türkiye

All times are local (TRT/UTC+3)

Cooperation is a part of every university's DNA. Working across institutions, sectors and borders is a fundamental part of their vision, mission and operations. Indeed, cooperation in education, research and innovation, balanced with healthy competition, is a European hallmark of excellence. But are we at risk of taking it for granted?

In many parts of the world, the value of cooperation is increasingly being called into question. While universities work together in ever more original and effective ways, their relationships with governments and the public are increasingly strained in many countries.

The 2026 EUA Annual Conference, hosted by Yeditepe University in Istanbul, Türkiye, from 16-17 April, will shed light on how key drivers are shaping why, how and with whom universities cooperate. Such drivers include (geo)politics, technological advances, sustainable development and economic challenges.

The event will investigate the evolution of different types of university partnerships; between institutions, with the public sector, with industry and other partners – locally, nationally and internationally, through a mix of panel and interactive discussions.

Wednesday 15 April

16.00-18.00: Leadership Roundtable (invitation-only, registration required)

Changing demographics: challenges and strategies

Room 3E01, Faculty of Design and Art building

Across Europe, shifting population trends are reshaping the landscape of higher education. Many countries face declining student numbers and growing imbalances across regions, raising difficult questions about how universities can remain both sustainable and inclusive.

This year's Leadership Roundtable will facilitate an exchange between top-level university leaders on how institutions can adapt to demographic change. Topics will range from new recruitment and outreach strategies, changes to the academic offer and modes of delivery, as well as lessons learnt from integrating refugees into campus communities.

The EUA Leadership Roundtable, which precedes the Annual Conference, is open to executive heads (Rectors, Presidents etc.) of EUA's individual and collective members. Participation is by invitation only and substitutes or representatives will not be accepted.*

13.40-14.50: Plenary Session 1 | Universities and democracy: rethinking relationships of trust

İnan Kıraç Conference Hall, Rectorate building

Universities depend on the trust of the societies they serve. In turn, they should sustain that trust through knowledge, dialogue and openness. Yet in many places, this relationship is under pressure. As public confidence in institutions shifts, and political and social divisions deepen, how can universities best earn and maintain the trust they need to thrive – and fulfil their societal role?

14.50-15.05: Time to move to breakout sessions

15.05-16.15: Breakout session 1A | Nurturing cooperative academic cultures in highly competitive environments

Rooms 3E01 & 3E02, Faculty of Design and Art Building

Cooperation lies at the heart of academia and is central to universities' missions. Yet, in today's context of growing competition for students, funding, resources and prestige, how can we sustain meaningful and authentic cooperation? In other words, how can universities reconcile the values of collegiality and collective engagement with the pressures of competition?

Building on EUA's work on academic careers and their assessment, this interactive fishbowl session invites participants to actively share their experiences and ideas, contributing to a collective reflection on how to foster cooperative academic cultures while remaining competitive.

- FACILITATED BY Maria Kelo, Director, Institutional Development, EUA, and Gregor Majdič, Board member, EUA

15.05-16.15: Breakout session 1B | How tech is transforming university cooperation

Architecture studios, Faculty of Design and Art building

Digitalisation is no longer merely seen as a means to speedier, more efficient workflows, but understood for its potential to transform how universities cooperate.

This session will explore how sustained investment and concerted action among academic, industry and public sector bodies can inspire new and lasting forms of cooperation in the digital space. Presentations will showcase digitally-steered initiatives that reinforce institutional capacity to initiate and manage long-term change.

TRANSFORMING UNIVERSITIES SO THAT ONLINE, HYBRID AND BLENDED MOBILITY THRIVE

15.05-16.15: Breakout session 1C | Bridging sectors, boosting innovation: why cooperation matters in R&I

Rooms Uzeyir Garih & Mario Levi, Rectorate building

In a policy context that strongly focuses on improving Europe's economic competitiveness, universities are crucial partners via their R&I collaborations with the private sector and other actors. Drawing on practice examples from EUA members, this session will explore challenges and success factors for universities and reflect on what this changing context for the third mission means for their R&I collaborations with non-academic partners. Due to the success of the call for contributions, two breakout sessions will be held on this topic.

15.05-16.15: Breakout session 1D | Policy update: the Union of Skills

Mavi Salon, Rectorate building

In March 2025, the European Commission published a Communication on the Union of Skills, which puts increased policy attention on 'upskilling and reskilling' in order to shape an economically and technologically more competitive Europe.

The session will provide an update on this highly relevant policy initiative for universities, briefing participants on EUA's work in this area and the potential impact of the Union of Skills on EU and national policies and funding.

17.00-18.00: Plenary session 2 | *Championing internal cooperation across faculties, cultures and backgrounds

İnan Kıraç Conference Hall, Rectorate building

Cooperation is often associated with external engagement, but it begins within the institution. Internal cooperation is just as critical as building partnerships beyond the university. Not least because universities are among the most diverse institutions, encompassing a wide range of disciplines, cultures, and communities.

This session will explore how leadership can foster meaningful internal collaboration across faculties, departments, and administrative units, reconcile competing interests and build alignment around shared institutional goals.

Friday 17 April

09.30-10.30: Plenary session 3 | *European Universities alliances, leadership and the future of international cooperation

İnan Kıraç Conference Hall, Rectorate building

European Universities alliances have opened new possibilities for cooperation, deepening partnerships and testing approaches to how universities jointly deliver on their missions. Yet, their long-term sustainability also depends on each member's strategic choices and available resources. As alliances vary in maturity and purpose, this session asks how university leaders decide to integrate them in their institutional strategy.

This plenary session will reflect on what alliances enable, where their limits lie and how institutions can shape sustainable, purpose-driven cooperation strategies for the future, with input from three university leaders on their experiences both within and beyond the alliance format.

- Silja Bára Ómarsdóttir, Rector, University of Iceland, Iceland
- Pedro Arezes, Rector, University of Minho, Portugal
- MODERATED BY Amanda Crowfoot, Secretary General, EUA

10.30-11.05: Coffee break & time to move to breakout sessions

11.05-12.15: Breakout session 2A | *Futures thinking workshop: the European Universities Initiative in 2035

Room 3E01, Faculty of Design and Art building

This interactive session will apply futures thinking methodologies to three distinct forecasts for European Universities alliances in 2035.

It is 2035. Your university still operates within the framework of the European Universities Initiative, but the landscape around you has transformed. Alliances may have become the backbone of a truly integrated European Education Area, or symbolic frameworks with little real impact. The future we will experience in 2035 is being shaped by today's choices. Back in 2026, the question is: what are the implications of each possible future for your university/alliance?

- FACILITATED BY Thomas Jørgensen, Director of Policy Coordination and Foresight, EUA

11.05-12.15: Breakout session 2B | Supporting at-risk higher education institutions and academics

Konferance salon, Faculty of Design and Art building

Support for at-risk academics is an important expression of solidarity and university values, but that is not all. It also helps to foster international research talent, benefits internationalisation at home, and can build bridges with our counterparts in challenging geopolitical contexts.

As many EUA members host and support researchers with an at-risk background, this session will facilitate an exchange about institutional strategies and approaches, funding and cooperation opportunities, as well as lessons learnt and some of EUA's work in the field.

- Gemma Irvine, Vice-President Equality & Diversity, Maynooth University, Ireland
- Henriette Stoeber, Senior Policy Analyst, Higher Education Policy, EUA
- Massimiliano Zattin, Vice-Rector International Relations, Doctoral and Postgraduate Studies, University of Padua, Italy
- MODERATED BY Ivanka Popović, Vice-President, EUA

11.05-12.15: Breakout session 2C | Strength in diversity: cooperating across sectors to serve society

Rooms Uzeyir Garih & Mario Levi, Rectorate building

Universities increasingly need to ensure and demonstrate their positive impact on the wellbeing and development of their local, regional and national environments.

To establish relevant objectives and a targeted approach to universities' service to society, well-designed cooperation initiatives between higher education institutions and non-university actors are often the most suitable path to take. This session will highlight notable examples from across Europe and the lessons learned by the universities that initiated them. Due to the success of the call for contributions, two breakout sessions will be held on this topic.

Following the publication of the European Commission's proposals for the EU's next long-term budget in July 2025, this session will provide an update on the future of funding programmes for 2028–2034. With the EU institutions engaged in a crucial phase of the co-design process, participants will gain insights into the latest policy developments shaping Erasmus+ and Horizon Europe, as well as the latter's relationship with the new European Competitiveness Fund. The UN's 2030 Agenda to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) is coming to an end. This agenda has mobilised universities across the world to work towards planetary and social sustainability. But it is now time to take stock and look forward to the next decades, a time that will be crucial for the future of humanity on planet Earth.

Since last year's Annual Conference, EUA's Spotlight on Sustainability campaign has mapped and highlighted practices from universities across Europe. And over the past months, experts and leaders from EUA's members have worked towards a vision for universities' role beyond 2030.
